Why are organizations in Nevada not doing this? Is this something that is being discussed and worked on?

The current status of the medical malpractice system requiring the attorney to pay for a $3,000-$5,000 voucher along with the $350,000 cap has completely destroyed medical malpractice and patient rights. Most attorneys in Nevada will not do medical malpractice anymore. They say it's not enough money to pursue and they don't want to gamble the fee it would take to get a voucher.

Patients are losing family members to wrongful death. They are often given no justice and no compensation for the horrendous acts caused by doctors.

There is NO WAY the community members of Nevada would vote for their rights to be taken away like this, so what got us here? I understand the concept of "Keep our doctors in Nevada," however there has to be balance because the system is currently drastically skewed. What would it take to have a revote to create a system by the people and for the people in this area, not by and for the insurance companies/medical corporations?

Thank You Sincerely,
